

Diamá (aka Claudia D'Addio) is an exceptional talent and unafraid to swim against the current. This might be the best way to describe 28 year old Italian, power-voiced Diamá. Since her debut on a Swiss TV talent-show, conceptually similar to American Idol, she has emerged as one of the most charismatic Swiss personalities.

She has already proven her vocal-skills on an international level since she participated as part of the group "Six4One" as Swiss entry for the Eurovision Song Contest 2006 held in Athens (Greece). There she performed alongside Andreas Lundstedt from the legendary Dance formation "Alcazar", Tinka Milinovic a Bosnian Superstar and three other singers from different nationalities. The project was led by renowned German composer/songwriter/producer Ralph Siegel, who is a veteran in the contest.

In 2008 she collaborated with Antonino Spadaccino, winner of the Italian cult-show "Amici" and delivered a song called "Kick it!" for the compilation "Die besten Fansong (The best Fansongs)" created by the Swiss soccer union and the newspaper Blick during the 2007 European Soccer Championship held in Switzerland.

Effortlessly but full of energy she manages to perform at big events such as; Live Earth Zurich 2006 held at Hallenstation Zurich or the Pirelli Calendar Night.

It has been quiet for a while around the sultry singer, but she has been anything but idle. For Model/DJ-ane Tanja La Croix, Claudia co-wrote four songs for the album "A trip to bikini island" with her Songwriter Jiameé, three of which she performed herself. During that period she also worked with legendary Swiss DJ-ane "Tatana" and for DJ Scaloni she recorded the song "Girls gone wild" that was then signed by Universal Music Switzerland.

Since her performance at the 2006 Christopher Street Day Switzerland, Claudia has quietly become a Swiss style- and queer-icon. This was confirmed when she was booked as main-act for the 2008 Mr. Gay Finale and for the 2008 Swiss Gay Pride main-concert as opening act for international stars such as House-Legend Ultra Naté ("Free"), Superstar Ari Gold and Ex-Pornstar-Now-Singer Colton Ford. In addition together with Tanja La Croix and Donna Tella alias Alf Heller, she delivered the vocals to the official Christopher Street Day Hymn 2008 called "Pink Riot!". Her next appearances next to Europride 2009 include the Miss Earth Finale 2009, DJ K-Skill's Club-Idol tour and she will be a judge at the 2009 Ms. Dragqueen contest.

June 2009, Claudia performed at the Europride 2009 Main-Stage and is therefore one of the only Swiss singers to ever perform at a Europride Event. She performed on both nights and announced her new artist name "Diamá"; Friday June 5, 2009 when she performed as part of the Glitzerhaus DJ-set, since she is lead singer of their new single "8 PM" (8 Pick-up Moves) together with Swiss Drag Queen-par excellence Stella Divine and Lady Mata Hari (1/3 of the DJ-Combo Glitzerhaus). On Saturday, June 6, 2009 she performed as Main act followed by artists such as LA Superstar "Guy B.", Chris Willis main voice for many David Guetta hits, singer & DJ-ane Billie Ray Martin and Italian Superstar Tommy Vee. In her set she performed two songs ("La Mossa" & "Mare") off her yet untitled debut-album. As a surprise during her set, New York power-voice-diva "Kelly King" entered the stage singing the first notes of Gloria Gaynor's "I will survive" turning it into a duet of "Pink Riot!" with Diamá.

2010 she again performs for her favorite community at the first Zurich Pride Festival. Two performances set her unique note; one with shooting star Adam Joseph, who recently worked with Bob Sinclair. Adam and Diamá duet the one song that defined House-Music forever; "Robin S. - Show me luv". At the big finale she performed her collaboration track "Glitzerhaus feat. Diamá & Stella Divine - 8 PM (8 Pick-up moves) during the Glitzerhaus grand finale.

Diamá is definitely the embodiment of a real diva and still proves that quality is always the first priority when it comes to music.

Her debut album will be released 2011 and her first single will drop in a few months. So...
